

WOMEN ^{OF} REFORM JUDAISM

BRIT AVODAH

A COVENANT OF SERVICE

Women of Reform Judaism (WRI) is a network of Jewish women working together to empower women and communities through the bonds of sisterhood, spirituality, and social justice.

We believe good volunteer-professional relationships are characterized by mutual trust, mutual respect and mutual recognition of each other's role and competency. Each understands what the other brings to the table and they seek each other's counsel. Our mission statement applies not only to our members, but to our staff, as well.

As Officers and volunteer professionals of WRI, we recognize our obligation to:

- 🌿 Respect and honor our staff partner's professional expertise
- 🌿 Provide honest and constructive feedback to our staff partner
- 🌿 Be considerate of our staff partner's work life balance
- 🌿 Work with our staff partner to promote the values of WRI
- 🌿 Provide meaningful and relevant guidance to our staff partner in fulfilling the direction provided by the Board of Directors; carefully consider their advice and counsel
- 🌿 Provide our staff partner with accurate, timely information.
- 🌿 Recognize that all of us are created "B'tselem Elohim" and refrain from gossip about each other or the staff

As Staff of WRI, we recognize our obligation to:

- 🌿 Respect and honor our lay partner's commitment to WRI
- 🌿 Recognize and honor our lay partner's WRI experience and professional expertise
- 🌿 Provide our lay partner with accurate, timely information
- 🌿 Respect and honor our lay partner's commitments outside of WRI
- 🌿 Use our professional knowledge to support our lay partner's vision and the vision of the organization.
- 🌿 Provide honest and constructive feedback to our lay partner
- 🌿 Recognize that all of us are created "B'tselem Elohim" and refrain from gossip about each other or the volunteer professionals
